Red Sky makes Senior Operational Appointment

Red Sky Energy Limited (ASX: ROG) is pleased to announce the appointment of Mr William (Bill) Lodwick as its new Exploration and Development Manager, commencing with immediate effect.

Reporting directly to the CEO, he will build and lead Red Sky's operational team whose first task will be to restart production at the recently acquired Cooper Basin Innamincka Dome project. In conjunction with this he will assess the project's so far unexploited oil and gas fields and tenements.

Mr Lodwick is a manager and geophysicist with over 35 years experience in the industry. He has managed exploration and production projects around the world including South East Asia and Australasia. He is a hands-on user of modern software packages such as Petrel and Kingdom and is expert with 2D and 3D seismic interpretation, processing and acquisition, VSP, inversion, AVO and other data types including risk analysis and volumetric evaluations.

Mr Lodwick's previous experience includes exploration manager for an ASX listed company of onshore and offshore acreage in the Otway Basin. He was also Principal Geophysicist with an international consultancy where he managed projects in Thailand, Gabon, Philippines and Malaysia.

Commenting on the appointment, Red Sky's CEO, Mr Andrew Knox, said:

"Bill's appointment is the first step to building our operational capability. He is a seasoned oil and gas professional who brings significant exploration and operational experience to Red Sky. We believe Bill is well positioned to assist the Company in fully exploiting the potential of the Innamincka assets and help drive future value accretive acquisitions"
